

Christina: Hi Cooper! Do you ever wish you lived in a different time?

Dr Cooper: Yeah, I do. I always wish I lived in a different time, to be honest.

Christina: Where? When?

Dr Cooper: Well, I wish I lived in... I think there are so many times, but if I had to choose one, I wish I lived in Paris, in the 1960s. The early 1960s.

Christina: That would be a great time to live.

Dr Cooper: You know, the only time I wish I didn't live in is right now, but let's talk about that another time.

Christina: Okay.

Dr Cooper: Do you ever wish you lived in a different time?

Christina: Well, no, I'm happy I live right now because if I didn't live right now, I wouldn't have met you.

Dr Cooper: oh...

Christina: so...

Dr Cooper: What if we both lived in Paris in the 1960s?

Christina: That would be great! Do you ever wish you were a celebrity?

Dr Cooper: Yeah

Christina: What kind of celebrity?

Dr Cooper: I wish I was a Rockstar! For sure! I wish I was a Rockstar!

Christina: I thought you wished you were an actor!

Dr Cooper: I wish, I wish- I am an actor, I wish Hollywood discovered me.

Christina: That's true. Too bad they haven't discovered you yet.

Dr Cooper: Yeah. How about you? Do you- maybe they will in the future.

Christina: Let's hope so.

Dr Cooper: Do you ever wish- do you ever wish you were a celebrity?

Christina: Nah, I'm happy with being Dr Cooper's wife.

Dr Cooper: I know, you're... okay. Christina, what's the best restaurant we've ever been to?

Christina: mmm the best restaurant we've ever been to I think it was in Paris, a very small and really cute...

Dr Cooper: The restaurant with the mouse?

Christina: Yes.

Dr Cooper: There was a mouse crawling on the floor, do you remember?

Christina: yeah, I know, so apart from that I think it was the best restaurant we've ever eaten at.

Dr Cooper: Apart from mouse?

Christina: Apart from the mouse, of course.

Dr Cooper: I think the best restaurant we've ever been to is Benares in London. That Indian food? Cause it was really different, it was very unique.

Christina: Well, unique and really, really fancy.

Dr Cooper: Yeah, very fancy. A lot of very rich people there.

Christina: Yeah, maybe that's why you liked it.

Dr Cooper: No, I'm not a fancy guy.

Christina: Okay, Mr. Celebrity. So, what's the worst thing you've ever done?

Dr Cooper: The worst thing I've ever done is, well, when I was a kid, my brother had no friends, and I don't think I stuck up for him enough, you know? I don't think I stuck up for him enough when people made fun of him.

Christina: Well, that's bad.

Dr Cooper: I know.

Christina: I feel sorry for him.

Dr Cooper: I feel sorry for him and I feel guilty. You know, you know what I was thinking?

Christina: What?

Dr Cooper: We had a really great time on our honeymoon in Italy, but I don't think I'm ever gonna go to Ampezzo, I don't think we're ever gonna go to Cortina d'Ampezzo to ski again. What do you think?

Christina: No, I think we're not gonna go there.

Dr Cooper: Why not?

Christina: Because I think we need to see snow next time, when we want to ski, right?

Dr Cooper: Yeah. When you go to a ski resort you have to ski, see, you have to see snow, right?

Christina: You have to see a lot of snow, otherwise it's kind of boring.

Dr Cooper: Yeah. I mean what's the point of going skiing, when you're just, when there's only brown grass?

Christina: There is no point at all.
